On 22 July 1950, at 1710 hours (Alaska time) an unidentified object was sighted in the air, over Ladd Air Force Base, at Fairbanks, Alaska. The object was sighted by personnel manning AAA gun positions near the Ladd AFB Airstrip, $64^{\circ}49'N - 147^{\circ}38'W$, and remained in sight for twenty (20) minutes.

Object was viewed laterally from gun positions at an angle of from 50 to 70 degrees and appeared very high.

Object was red in color with two (2) white dots underneath which seemed to revolve around it. It was round in shape, about three (3) feet in diameter and of unknown construction.

Object moved from East to West at an unknown rate of speed. It appeared to be moving in a direct line with no evasive action, and slowly descending.

Any exhaust emitted from the object evaporated very rapidly. The two (2) white dots appeared to be reflectors. There were no visible means of support; no visible means of propulsion; no audible sound; no apparent air ducts; and no evidence of radio antennae or irregular surface protuberances.

After the object had been almost stationary for approximately twenty (20) minutes, a stream of smoke was noted. Immediately thereafter the object exploded and disappeared from view.

The following persons on active duty with United States Armed Forces at Ladd Air Force Base, observed the object: [REDACTED], USA; [REDACTED], USA; [REDACTED], USA; [REDACTED], USA; and several unidentified soldiers of a Battery of the 867th AAA, stationed at Ladd Air Force Base. All observers have had aerial observation training, and all were considered by the investigating officer to be very reliable.

Weather at the time of observation was CAVU.

There were no known aircraft in the vicinity at the time; and all weather stations contacted in the vicinity reported there were no testing devices sent aloft by their units at the time of sighting.

The following are the Comments appearing at the close of the Alaskan Air Command Intelligence Report 17-50: "Although the sources of information are considered to be reliable, the truth of the incident cannot be evaluated with dependable objectivity. No material interpretation can be offered as to the origin or nature of the object mentioned in this report. The possibility exists that the objects were meteorological balloons which might have floated into the immediate area from some other station in the Territory of Alaska. The possibility also exists that the object sighted was some kind of terrestrial body."

COMMENT: Alaskan Air Command evaluated the report B-6. Alaskan Air Command original report (Intelligence Report 17-50) was forwarded to the Director of Intelligence, USAF, Washington, D.C. on 13 September 1950.

SUMMARY OR SID REPORT:

This report is a summary of Alaskan Air Command Intelligence Report No. 17-50, covering the reporting of an unidentified aerial object observed in the vicinity of Ladd Air Force Base, Fairbanks, Alaska on 22 July 1950.

Evaluation is that given report by Alaskan Air Command.

Object was possibly a terrestrial body, although the origin and identification are not discernable. The possibility exists that the object was a meteorological balloon which might have floated into the area from some other station in the Territory of Alaska.

FROM (Agency)	REPORT NO.	91501
Headquarters, Alaskan Air Command	1A-17-50	PAGE	5	OF 5 PAGES
7. All weather stations in the vicinity were contacted, and there are no tracking devices sent aloft by the weather units. 8. None 9. None 10. None 11. Comments: Although the sources of information are considered to be reliable, the truth of the incident cannot be evaluated with dependable objectivity. No material interpretation can be offered as to the origin or nature of the objects mentioned in this report. The possibility exists that the objects are meteorological balloons which might have floated into the immediate area from some other station in the Territory of Alaska. The possibility also exists that the object sighted is a live bird of some kind. 12. APPROVAL Lst Lt., USA Intelligence Officer
